

Dr. Cohen recently performed cataract surgery on my left eye, a “lazy” eye that has compromised my vision since early childhood. I am 72 years old. I had been assured, on numerous occasions, that nothing could be done to address this problem. Well, not quite true.

I now find, after the surgery, considerable improvement in my left eye. I still cannot read with it, of course, but I can decipher large bold letters, I can see the time on my watch, I see far more clearly both up close and at a distance. Everything appears unusually crisp. I certainly did not enjoy this degree of vision before.

I am very grateful to Dr. Cohen and so pleased with the outcome.
